Elsewhere will be found the announcement of the Boerne Fair. Secretary Holekamp writes us that his section has had quite a drouth but that it was decided to have the fair nevertheless and he thinks it will be a great fair. "After all hard times," he writes, "the people need a stimulant and the fair is just the right thing, in our minds, to bring the people together for another thought and hope." No doubt Mr. Holekamp is right, and we are sure all who can will gladly attend the fair at Boerne on September 4, 5 and 6, 1925.

Mrs. Herbert Smith and children, who have been the guests of Mrs. Smith's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Reily, for the past six weeks, left Thursday evening for their home at Needles, California. Captain and Mrs. E. V. Behan and children, Montel and Jeanne, who have spent the summer visiting at Wichita Falls, Corpus Christi and Hondo, left Tuesday for their home at Fort Sam Houston where the Captain takes up his duties Monday, at the expiration of a three-months furlough.

Mrs. E. J. Brice and children and Miss Jessie Fields of Leakey spent last week-end here with Mrs. Chas. Bendele. Miss Lucille Brice, who is attending a San Antonio business college, also spent the week-end here as the guest of Mrs. Bendele.

Joe Holzhaus was out from San Antonio last week-end on a visit to his brother-in-law, J. J. Droitcourt, and family. Mr. Holzhaus, who is Advertising Co. were here in the government service, was enjoying his annual vacation.

FORD ANNOUNCES IMPROVED LINE OF BODY TYPES.

Changes Are Most Pronounced—Bodies Longer, Lower and All-Steel.

Body changes and chassis refinements more pronounced than any made since the adoption of the Model T chassis were announced here today by the Ford Motor Company. There will be no advance in price, it also was stated. Production of the improved type will begin September 1st at the Houston Branch of the Company which covers this territory.

Outstanding features of the improvements in both open and enclosed types are lower, all-steel bodies on a lowered chassis, complete new design in most body types, a change from black to color in closed cars, larger, lower fenders, newly designed seats and larger, more powerful brakes.

Longer lines, effected through higher radiator and redesigned cowl and bodies are apparent in all the improved Ford cars, but are especially pronounced in the open types. Wide crown fenders hung close to the wheels contribute to the general effect of lowness and smartness.

While Runabout and Touring car remain in black, the closed bodies are finished in harmonic color schemes, enhanced by nickel radiators. The Coupe and Tudor bodies are finished in deep channel green while the Fordor is rich Windsor Maroon.

Greater comfort is provided for driver and passenger in both open and closed cars by larger compartments, more deeply cushioned seats and greater leg room.

Many new conveniences are also incorporated in the improved cars. In the Runabout, Touring Car, Coupe and Tudor, the gasoline tank is under the cowl and filled through an ingeniously located filler cap completely hidden from sight by a cover similar in appearance to a cowl ventilator. One-piece windshield and narrowed pillars in the Tudor and Coupe offer the driver greatly increased visibility and improved ventilation.

Driving comfort is materially increased by lower seats, scientifically improved back rests and lowered steering wheel. Brake and clutch pedals are wider and more conveniently spaced.

Four doors are now provided on the Touring car and two on the Runabout permitting the driver to take his place from the left side of the car. Curtains held secure by rods, open with the doors.

Most important in the mechanical changes are the improved brakes. The transmission brake drum and bands have been considerably increased in size which gives the foot brake softer and more positive action as well as longer life. The rear wheel brake drums are larger and the brake of self energizing type.

Cord tires are now standard equipment on all Ford cars.

MRS. ALICE DELLA PETERS SHEALY.

Mrs. Thomas H. Shealy, affectionately known by the people of Hondo as Miss Della, has been called to the home over there. We had heard of her illness but could not realize that it was so serious until the word came last Sunday afternoon that she had passed from the shadows of earth to the land of "The Perfect Day."

Mrs. Alice Della Peters Shealy was born April 7, 1890, near Bryan, Texas. The family moved to Hondo in 1896, when Della was a little girl of six years. Here she grew up and lived among the friends of her childhood until she was married. It was in January 1904, a girl in her fourteenth year, that she was converted and joined the Baptist Church of Hondo, in which she held her membership until she was called away in death. Miss Della lived a beautiful Christian life and exerted a wholesome Christian influence wherever she went. She was active in the work of her church, ever ready and willing to give a helping hand when needed. She seldom missed a service of her church unless providentially hindered. For a number of years she was an efficient secretary of the Sunday School and only gave up this position to accept that of a teacher. She was greatly beloved by us all, not only because of her beautiful character but also for her work's sake.

Miss Della was married to Mr. Thomas H. Shealy of Bryan, Texas, November 23, 1924. Since her marriage her home has been Bryan, Texas, where she has lived happily with her husband the nine brief months of her married life. After a short illness of only a few days, God called her to the home not made with hands eternal in the heavens, at the age of thirty-five years, four months and sixteen days.

Mrs. Shealy is survived by her husband, Thomas H. Shealy, Bryan, Texas; father, A. F. Peters, Hondo, Texas; sisters Mrs. C. H. McCall and Mrs. George E. Neuman both of Hondo, Texas; brothers, Oscar Peters, Kicksprings, Texas; Jeff Peters also of Kicksprings, Texas; Milton Peters, Sonora, Texas; Volney Peters, Florence, Texas; Noah Peters, Lubbock, Texas; and Mirven Peters, Stephenville, Texas.

The funeral services were held in the Hondo Baptist Church Monday afternoon, August 24, 1925. After a brief service at the Oakwood Cemetery by the Eastern Star and the pastor her body was laid to rest surrounded by a multitude of sorrowing friends and relatives. The grave was then covered with beautiful flowers which had been provided by loving hands.

"Sleep on, beloved, sleep, and take thy rest;
Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best—

Good-night! Good-night! Good-night!"

Her Pastor.

This donation was secured through the efforts of County Agent, Jack Ferguson, who called the Goat men's attention to the need of the College for a good flock for both instructive and experimental purposes.

The A. & M. College has never had a flock of Angora Goats and the work which this gift will enable them to do in the experimental line will no doubt prove of great value to the growing industry of Mohair Production in this section of the country.

FLETCHER DAVIS, Editor.

Entered as second class matter June 24, 1922, at the Postoffice at Hondo, Texas, under Act of March 3, 1879.

HONDO, TEXAS, AUGUST 1, 1925.

Much ado has been raised over the missing link, but the way some folks make monkeys of themselves even the evolutionists are liable to have to admit there is none.

Indications are that feed stuff is going to be at a premium over much of Texas this winter. It stands every farmer in hand to be prepared to take advantage of any favorable seasons that may come and grow a fall feed crop.

Nature has implanted in the heart of the most brazen flapper a certain innate modesty, and when we see one of the poor things self-consciously tugging at her abbreviated skirt we think what a pity nature can not be permitted to take its own course.

Over much of West and Southwest Texas a profitable fall crop is beans. They grow and make rapidly and when the season is favorable produce an abundant yield. The bean, in some one of its numerous varieties, is a standard article of human food over most of the civilized world.

Repeated experiments at the various experiment stations over the country seem to have established it as a fact that the grain of the grain sorghums are equal to corn in feed value. The farmer, therefore, who can produce a good fall crop of these grains need not be much worse off for feed on account of the failure of the corn crop. Plenty of grain sorghum properly fed will mean live stock kept in fair condition and forced sales eliminated.

Idle men, able bodied men, anxious and willing to work and needing the proceeds of honest toil, but idle because they can find no task to which to turn, is one of the most evil signs of the times. It portends a lowering of the general standard of living and an increase in petty crime. But we have been living at a jazzy pace, and it may be that it will take the pinch of hard times to bring us back to a sober realization of the hard realities of life. It takes a stern school to impart knowledge to most of us.

The last issue of FARMING closed its third volume and with this issue we begin its fourth year. Gradually it is establishing a clientele that means its permanency. We appreciate the help we have received from numerous friends every where, and hope every one will continue your good offices. Write us your farm experiences for publication, advertise in the paper and induce your neighbors and friends to subscribe for it and read it. It is on the good will of its patrons that the success of a farm journal is builded.

The California Fruit Grower's Exchange of Los Angeles, California, spent $900,000.00 for advertising the 1923-1924 orange and lemon crop of that state. The funds were raised by assessing each member of the exchange 4.5 cents per box of oranges and grape fruit and 7 cents per box of lemons. The Exchange has followed this system of advertising California citrus fruits for the last nine or ten years during which time it has spent several million dollars. Does any one imagine why would keep it up if "advertising don't pay?"

bank account. There is every reason to believe that such a system would encourage rather than discourage carelessness. The argument is made that such insurance would protect the "widow and orphan."

But if such insurance tended to increase carelessness and injuries it would be poor protection. Secondly, there are no satisfactory statistics showing that any considerable percentage of serious accidents are caused by persons who possess neither personal property or insurance.

If this idea could be put over on the automobile it could then be fastened on to any other business or industry.

The whole proposal is just another plan to launch the state in the insurance business after making a new form of taxation compulsory.—Selected.

The total number of Federal Income-tax Returns filed throughout the United States by individuals in 1924, showing income received during the calendar year 1923, was 7,698,321. The aggregate net income reported in these returns was 26,336,837,843 and the tax $703,962,165, which represents the greatest number of returns filed and the largest aggregate net income reported for any year. For the State of Texas the number filed was 200,683, which showed net income amounting to $629,967,005 and tax $11,087,537. As compared with the preceding year, the figures for the United States show an increase of 910,840 or 13.42 per cent in the number of returns filed, and increase in the total net income reported amounting to $5,000,125,818 or 23.48 per cent, but a decrease of $157,095,143 or 18.24 per cent in the total tax. For the State of Texas the increase in the number of returns was 13,818 or 7.39 per cent, the increase in the total net income amounted to $84,065,429 or 15.40 per cent, and the decrease in the tax was $3,032,118 or 21.47 per cent.

It is the Constitution which protects us from ourselves and from each other—from ourselves when we would act on great questions without due deliberation and from others when the majority would disregard the rights of minorities, and it is to be hoped that we shall always have courts that will refuse to listen to the cry of the howling mob, but will proceed with due deliberation to administer constitutional justice to all. If you have property the Constitution protects you in your right to enjoy it. If you are without property the Constitution protects your life and liberty. Long live the Constitution! Long live the courts that will preserve it! A citizen who will disregard it and seek to deprive others of its equal protection is not entitled to its protection of his liberty or property. A citizen who refuses to conform his life and habits to its specific requirements is an outlaw and does not deserve its benign protection. A citizen who engages in a business outlawed by the Constitution does not deserve its protection and another citizen who patronizes a business outlawed by the Constitution has no right to claim the protection of the Constitution. If I claim its protection of my life, liberty and property, I must respect it myself and love it and live it.—V. A. COLLINS.

STATE RIGHTS AGAIN.

TOBY IS AFRAID FOR THE COWS.
(A Story.)
By Fletcher Davis.

There was consternation in the barn yard!

Not that kind that agitates the barn yard fowls when something unusual invades their domain, but something more serious.

When Toby Hicks arrived at Bill Morgan's barn at his usual morning hour for milking, he found one of Mr. Morgan's fine Jerseys dead, another down and several others showing unmistakable evidences of illness.

The suddenness of it all and the seriousness of it filled both men with anxious concern.

What could have killed this valuable animal? Were they all going to die?

And again Toby's heart sank as he thought of the possibility of losing his job as Bill Morgan's milk hand.

Summer was now well advanced and Toby's job of milking each morning for Bill Morgan, and assisting with the cream separator, had supplied him with sufficient ready cash to meet his living necessities, and his ability to pay cash and get the reduction in price for cash had enabled him to purchase more. So he and his family were living better than they had ever lived before and at less actual cost.

Small wonder that one who had tasted so much of life's hardships for one so young as Toby should feel an anxious concern over the one opportunity that seemed to offer him a way to competency and a measure of independence.

Man is so constituted that he must first eat bitter bread before he can appreciate the sweet; and Toby had eaten his.

"Where did you get your knowledge of poisoning symptoms?" asked Bill Morgan with the first tinge of harshness and impatience Toby had ever heard from his lips.

Toby admitted somewhat diffidently that since he had been helping with the cows he had been reading every thing the agricultural agencies of the State and Federal Governments could furnish him on the subject of dairying and dairy cattle, and that he had taken particular pains to read up on the effect of arsenic poisoning while they were having their grasshopper fight, and the symptoms he saw here were as he had seen them described by authorities.

"But it is impossible; my cattle have had no chance to be poisoned," argued Mr. Morgan. "He thought about it when we were puttin' out the poison for the grasshoppers and when I wasn't thinkin' of any thing else but killin' the hoppers."

"But if they were mine I'd dose each one with some raw eggs, anyhow," urged Toby.

Just then the cow that was down suffered a paroxysm and stretched out still. They hurried to her and she was dead.

"Where did she get this mud on her," inquired Toby, stooping to look had befallen many others. Much of the heavy rainfall that had flooded off of other fields, carrying much of the top soil away with it, had soaked into the subsoil on Toby's terraced acres, and by judiciously breaking the surface, as soon as the soil was in proper condition for cultivating, and maintaining a soil mulch his crop was still growing and producing after many others had begun to show unmistakable evidences of the effect of drought.

Even his small acreage of cotton showed more than an average of blooms, for while his cultivating had kept the soil in condition, killed the weeds and given the plants a chance to develop a healthy, vigorous growth, the frequent agitation of the plants, allied with the heat, had killed most of the boll weevils while in embryo, by knocking the punctured forms off the stalks onto the dry, hot ground where they soon dried up, and had kept the bollweevil damage to the minimum.

But Toby wasted no time thinking over these things. He was face to face with a serious problem; and rallying from his first sickening fear for the loss of his job, he fixed his attention upon the suffering brutes that seemed to look a dumb appeal to him out of their great, soft brown eyes.

Toby loved the gentle animals with a feeling not born of selfish regard for the service they were rendering him, great as it was, and out of his love came sympathy and from love and sympathy came an understanding not given to those without such feelings.

After a hurried examination Toby told Mr. Morgan that the symptoms looked to him for the world like those described as arsenic poisoning.

"And tell him to bring enough solution of hydrated oxide of iron for the whole herd; there ain't any mistake about 'em being poisoned."

In due time the veterinarian arrived, but not until ages it seemed to anxious Bill Morgan. In the meantime, he and Toby had drenched each animal plentifully with raw eggs and powdered sulphur and by the time the veterinarian arrived the stricken animals were already showing some measure of relief.

After working the rest of the day with the cattle, examining the water-hole that had been thoroughly stirred up by the cattle wading around in it

Toby admitted somewhat diffidently that since he had been helping with the cows he had been reading every thing the agricultural agencies of the State and Federal Governments could furnish him on the subject of dairying and dairy cattle, and that he had taken particular pains to read up on the effect of arsenic poisoning while they were having their grasshopper fight, and the symptoms he saw here were as he had seen them described by authorities.

"But it is impossible; my cattle have had no chance to be poisoned," argued Mr. Morgan. "He thought about it when we were puttin' out the poison for the grasshoppers and when I wasn't thinkin' of any thing else but killin' the hoppers."

"But if they were mine I'd dose each one with some raw eggs, anyhow," urged Toby.

Just then the cow that was down suffered a paroxysm and stretched out still. They hurried to her and she was dead.

"Where did she get this mud on her," inquired Toby, stooping to look more closely in the dawning morning light.

"Oh, I turned 'em in the little west trap yesterday evening. It was so hot and the flies were so bad they didn't graze much but stood around in the slough most of the time," answered Mr. Morgan.

"The water is low and they drank a lot of it, I guess, for when I turned 'em in none of 'em would drink at the trough," he went on.

"That settles it," said Toby excitedly. "There is no doubt about it being arsenic poisoning. Don't you remember that the slough did not get high enough to flow out of that water hole during that dashing rain-right after we had our last grasshopper poisoning and sowed the bait all over them hillsides," waving his hand towards the draw from which the slough got its drainage.

"Yes, yes; and I remember the waterhole was covered with a scum mostly of dead grasshoppers and bran right after that rain. What a fool I am not to have thought of it."

"Mollie, bring Toby the egg basket while I telephone to Creedville for that veterinarian," he called to his anxious wife.

And to Toby he said:

"Don't let any more of 'em die if you can help it, Toby." As he hurried away to the telephone Toby Hicks called after him: "And tell him to bring enough solution of hydrated oxide of iron for the whole herd; there ain't any mistake about 'em being poisoned."

Small wonder that one who had been a long time since we have heard so much about the rights and the reserved powers of the States as we have heard of late. That was what defeated the proposed child-labor amendment; the Tennessee legislature, for example, in rejecting the amendment passed a set of resolutions reaffirming in set terms the doctrine that there were certain rights and duties belonging to the States, which the Federal government was usurping or benignly asked to usurp. Only the other day Senator Borah lent his powerful voice to the same cause. We are in danger, said he, of building up a bureaucracy at Washington, inquisitive, clumsy and expensive, and of surrendering all the hardwon rights of the individual and the local community to a well-meaning but mechanical and often oppressive central government.

The interesting thing is the chorus of approval that this speech of Senator Borah's called forth. The Eminent Senator had what the English call a "good press," which is something he does not always have when he discusses our foreign affairs. Almost no newspaper or commentator criticized his views unfavorably. Evidently he said what many people were thinking.

True they were suffering from a rather severe drought, following the last heavy, beating rain late in June, and crops on many of the neighboring farms had already begun to fail. But Toby's field had been so well terraced that it escaped the damage from washing that

"But you owe the saving of most of them to your prompt discovery of the cause, and administering of the antidote," he advised.

"And that's all because Toby here had read up on what to do in such a case before it happened," replied Mr. Morgan. "He thought about it when we were puttin' out the poison for the grasshoppers and when I wasn't thinkin' of any thing else but killin' the hoppers."

"But if they were mine I'd dose each one with some raw eggs, anyhow," urged Toby.

Just then the cow that was down suffered a paroxysm and stretched out still. They hurried to her and she was dead.

"Where did she get this mud on her," inquired Toby, stooping to look

"I—I—I was afraid for the cows."

The first meeting of the new Extension Committee of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America was held at Chicago, June 24th at the Extension Service office. The chief matter before the Committee was the question of developing a definite three year program of extension activities comprising both cattle and milk promotion work. These plans will be fully developed during the coming months and presented to the Board of Directors for approval next Fall. Fred A. Koenig, Director of Extension since 1922 was reappointed. A special exhibit for the National Dairy Show at Indianapolis was authorized. The personnel of the Committee is as follows: Mrs. Medill McCormick, Byron, Ill., Chairman; Fred Pabst, Milwaukee, Wis.; W. S. Moscrip, Lake Elmo, Minnesota; H. V. Noyes, Oneida, New York; Fred F. Field, Brockton, Mass., and H. W. Norton, Jr., Lansing Michigan, Secy.

After all is said and done at that Dayton trial the evolutionists can not prove that man is a creature of evolution; neither can the fundamentalists prove that he is not. No man knows and no man ever will know. Both is speculation pure and simple; you can take your choice and pin your faith to either as you like. What the world is chiefly concerned in is that the evolutionist prove his faith by not harking back to his ancestry while the child of a fallen god falls no lower.

Fools never age.

To each man his own song.

A wise man is likened to the dumb and a fool to a squirrel.

The hemlock tree does not bear roses.

There is no concealment from a mother-in-law.

Let us learn from the dog, who understands his master's moods.

The louder the thunder the fewer the rain-drops.

Like shekels, good words are hard to get.

A SINGING CRICKET STARTED IT.

A singing cricket started it—

A cricket, hidden out of sight,

Singing there as the night moths flit

Around about the candle light.

The weary tasks were ended then,

The fretful child lay still and slept,

The work-worn mother wondered—when

From the shadows that chirping crept.

She glanced down at the greying head

Wearily on the table bent,

And from her heart a shadow fled,

Heavenward a prayer she sent,

Thanking the Lord for given strength

That bears and sees that sweet content,

Though long hidden, is found at length

Where simple peace finds tenement.

A singing cricket started it—

A cricket hidden out of sight,

furnishing that institution with long time supply of such stuff as is used over the counter of banks.

By getting this order such large numbers and at such time in advance of its need by bank as to enable us to work as a fill-in during slack moments in the shop, we were enabled to the prices of regular bank houses and make a satisfactory profit.

And while supplying needs for stationery, the bank enabled one of its customers to do to that extent his deposit in bank, thus in a double sense supporting home industry and institutions.

BOERNE FAIR.

The Kendall County Fair Association of Boerne, Texas, has decided to put on an old settlers dance on Saturday afternoon the second day of the Fair, September the 5th.

The program will include various contests and prizes given by local merchants and the Association, to old Fiddlers contest, etc. etc.

The American Legion has invited Mr. Amasa Clark of Bandera (one of the 19 veterans of the Mexican war who is living today) and Mr. J. Marvin Hunter is invited to be Mr. Clark's escort on this occasion, (the legion paying all their expenses), and it is hoped that these gentlemen will see fit to honor our fair with their presence.

Though late in the announcement of this dance with the old time music, we know that the old time settlers of our immediate vicinity and adjoining counties are going to take advantage of the first afternoon that is given to them for a reunion in probably the last 25 years.

This program does not interfere with any other part of the program of that day of the fair.

The Fair Association has also decided to put on a war relics exhibit including souvenirs of the early days through all wars up to the modern equipment of this day.

These souvenirs can bear a card with name of present owner and a brief history attached which will prove most interesting to hundreds of fair visitors.

There are numbers of these old souvenirs in most every family and the Association will appreciate the community's interest in sending some exhibit that will be a schooling in History for us.
